Marion Street Pedestrian Bridge opening delayed; will open the week of Nov. 6

Due to harsh weather over the weekend and some technical challenges, the bridge will not be opening Monday, November 6, as previously planned.

Seattle (November 5, 2023) – The Marion Street Pedestrian Bridge opening is delayed. It was originally planned to open at 6 AM on Monday, November 6, but due to harsh weather over the weekend and some technical challenges, the new pedestrian bridge will now open before the end of the week. Over the weekend, all seven spans of the temporary bridge were removed and the connection to Colman Dock was installed.

The Office of the Waterfront and Civic Projects is working through the technical details and expects to have more information in the coming days.

Closure details:

- The temporary Marion Street Pedestrian Bridge permanently closed at 6 PM on Nov. 3.
- The new bridge is expected to open before the end of the week of Nov. 6. Work will take place day and night as needed to open the bridge as soon as possible.
- Pedestrian access to Colman Dock ferry terminal will remain open at all times from ground level entrances on Alaskan Way at Yesler Way, Columbia St and Marion St.
- Marion St between Alaskan Way and 1st Ave reduced to one lane 9 AM to 6 AM, to maintain full access during peak morning hours.
- Flaggers will be on-site to assist traffic and pedestrian access, 6 AM to 10 AM on Nov. 6 and Nov. 7.
- Parking restrictions on Western Ave between Columbia and Marion streets.
- Access on Columbia St, including the bus stop, is fully open.
